

Contents

Preface	xiii
Abbreviations, symbols, journal acronyms, and other conventions	xv
1. Introduction	1
1.1 Aims and background	1
1.2 A brief outline of the history of the Romanian language	2
1.3 The Romanian writing system	4
1.4 Major typological characteristics of Romanian morphology	7
1.5 Major patterns of allomorphy in Romanian nouns, verbs, adjectives, and derivational morphology due to sound change	9
2. Nouns and adjectives	19
2.1 Introduction	19
2.1.1 Sketch of basic morphological structure of the noun and adjective	19
2.1.2 Morphological similarities and asymmetries between nouns and adjectives: number, gender, and case	20
2.1.3 The role of ‘animacy’ and of ‘mass’ meaning in the history of nominal morphology	25
2.1.3.1 Animacy traits	25
2.1.3.2 Mass traits	30
2.1.4 Morphological segmentation: difficulties and solutions	33
2.2 Patterns of desinential number marking and the history of the desinences	37
2.2.1 Introduction	37
2.2.2 The masculine	38
2.2.3 The feminine: the nature and inventory of plural endings	43
2.2.4 Final considerations on number endings	51
2.3 The morphological history of the Romanian genus alternans (or ‘neuter’)	53
2.3.1 Characteristics of the genus alternans	53
2.3.2 The correlation between endings and genus alternans membership, in synchrony and diachrony	56
2.3.3 Genus alternans nouns in plural -ă	70
2.4 Inflexional case marking of nouns and adjectives	74
2.4.1 Introduction	74
2.4.2 Inflexional case marking	75
2.4.2.1 Syncretism in feminine nouns	75
2.4.2.2 Feminine inflexional endings in oblique cases	81
2.4.2.3 The function of agreement in genitive–dative singular marking	83
2.4.3 Between enclitic–inflexional and proclitic marking	84
2.4.3.1 Introduction	84
2.4.3.2 Oblique marking by proclitic lui	84
2.4.3.3 Genitive mixed marking: inflexional + proclitic al	87

vi CONTENTS

2.4.4 Analytic (prepositional) markers of oblique cases	89
2.4.4.1 Introduction	89
2.4.4.2 The genitive relationship	89
2.4.4.3 The dative relationship	93
2.4.4.4 Origins, evolution, frequency	95
2.5 Analogical levelling and creation of alternation	96
2.5.1 Levelling and creation of number alternations in nouns	96
2.5.2 Novel allomorphy in feminine nouns: the type stradă ~ străzi	98
2.6 The patterning of case and number marking: feminine nouns	99
2.7 Idiosyncratic irregularities	104
2.7.1 Idiosyncratic remnants of Latin imparisyllabics	104
2.7.2 Imparisyllabics of the type mamă ~ mămâni	109
2.7.3 The type ferăstrău ~ ferăstraie	112
2.7.4 The type grâu ~ grâne	113
2.8 The history of morphologically invariant forms	114
2.8.1 Introduction	114
2.8.2 Inventory of invariant nouns according to gender	114
2.8.3 Typology, causes, and history of invariant forms	116
2.8.3.1 The etymological and/or phonological type	116
2.8.3.2 The neological type	126
2.8.4 Invariant adjectives: typology and the evolution of the class	127
2.9 History of the morphological marking of the vocative	129
2.9.1 Vocative desinences	129
2.9.2 The history of the vocative endings	132
2.9.3 Other means of marking the vocative morphologically	136
2.9.4 The complex diastatic use of different vocative forms	137
3. Pronominal and indefinite structures	140
3.1 History of the stressed versus clitic distinction	140
3.1.1 Overview	140
3.1.2 The stressed forms: preservation versus reduction of distinctions	140
3.1.3 The stressed forms: inventory	141
3.1.4 The clitic forms	143
3.2 Morphological characteristics of clitics and combinations of clitics	145
3.2.1 Overview	145
3.2.2 Syllabic versus asyllabic clitics	145
3.2.3 Paradigmatic gaps	146
3.2.4 Pronominal clitic clusters	148
3.3 Emergence of morphological markers of distance/respect in pronouns	150
3.3.1 Overview	150
3.3.2 Absence of politeness distinctions	150
3.3.3 Binary politeness distinctions	151
3.3.4 Plural for singular	156
3.3.5 Dânsul	157
3.4 Gender and number in pronouns	158
3.4.1 Overview	158
3.4.2 Morphological heterogeneity and preservation versus reduction of gender oppositions	158
3.4.3 Number	162

3.5 Case marking in pronouns	163
3.5.1 Overview	163
3.5.2 Defective paradigms	163
3.5.3 ‘Overabundance’ and suppletion	164
3.5.4 Suppletive and other modes of case distinction	165
3.5.5 Types of inflexion and case syncretisms	167
3.5.6 Multiple marking	168
3.5.7 Synthetic versus analytic structures in genitive–dative case marking	168
3.6 Relative and interrogative pronouns	169
3.6.1 Inventory, distribution, usage	169
3.6.2 Inflexional properties	175
3.6.3 Origins, history, and special uses in old Romanian	177
3.7 Indefinites	182
3.7.1 Overview	182
3.7.2 Unul and its compounds (niciunul, vreunul)	183
3.7.2.1 Unul, una	183
3.7.2.2 Niciunul, niciuna	186
3.7.2.3 Vreunul, vreuna	187
3.7.3 Altul, alta	187
3.7.4 Nimeni, nimic	189
3.7.5 Compounds with interrogative–relative elements	191
3.7.5.1 Overview	191
3.7.5.2 The formative -și	191
3.7.5.3 Indefinites nește, neștine, nescare/nescai, neșchit	192
3.7.5.4 Series with the indefinite marker from forms of the verb a vrea	193
3.7.5.5 The series in fie-	196
3.7.5.6 The series in nici-	196
3.7.5.7 The series in măcar	197
3.7.5.8 New series	197
3.7.6 The quantifiers tot ‘all’, atât ‘so much, that much’, mult ‘much’, puțin ‘little’	197
3.7.7 Atare, cutare, acătare	198
3.7.8 Anume, anumit	199
3.7.9 Compounds formed from indefinites and non-lexicalized collocations	199
3.8 The form alde	200
4. Determiners and the deictic system	201
4.1 Introduction	201
4.2 Historical morphology of the definite article from Latin ILLE	201
4.2.1 Forms and allomorphy	202
4.2.2 Origin	203
4.2.3 The position of the definite article and its host	204
4.2.3.1 Enclisis	204
4.2.3.2 Proclisis	204
4.2.3.3 Position in the nominal phrase	207
4.2.4 Morphophonological changes	209
4.2.5 Polydefinite structures	212
4.2.6 Idiosyncrasies and irregularities	213

viii CONTENTS

4.3	Al in diachrony	216
4.4	Morphological history of the indefinite article	219
4.5	Demonstratives as determiners, deictic adjectives, and pronouns	220
4.5.1	Introduction	220
4.5.2	Proximal demonstratives	220
4.5.3	Distal demonstratives	222
4.5.4	Inflexional and distributional properties	222
4.5.5	Special demonstrative systems	224
4.5.6	Demonstratives in diachrony	224
4.5.7	The grammaticalization of the determiner cel	227
4.6	Other modes of deixis (locatives, adverbs)	235
4.7	The formatives -a , -le , and -și	238
4.7.1	Introduction	238
4.7.2	The formative -a	239
4.7.3	The formative -le	244
4.7.4	The formative -și	246
4.7.5	The formatives -re , -ne , -te , -i	248
5.	Possessives	249
5.1	Introduction	249
5.2	The paradigm: conservation and reorganization	249
5.2.1	Stressed forms of the first and second persons	249
5.2.2	Stressed third-person forms	252
5.2.3	Possessive affixes	254
6.	The verb	258
6.1	A brief overview of the structure of the Romanian verb	258
6.2	Inflexion classes and their origins	260
6.2.1	The four inherited classes: their origins and characteristics	260
6.2.2	The distinction between the ‘second’ and the ‘third’ conjugations in diachrony	265
6.2.3	Historical productivity of the classes	268
6.2.4	The emergence of new inflexional subclasses and their causes	269
6.2.5	Phonologically induced neutralization of conjugation class distinctions, and resultant changes of conjugation class	273
6.2.6	On the genesis of new conjugation classes	274
6.3	The inflexional paradigm of the verb	278
6.3.1	The inflexional marking of person and number	278
6.3.2	Inflexional marking of tense: present, imperfect, preterite, pluperfect, and synthetic conditional	289
6.3.3	Inflexional marking of indicative vs subjunctive	297
6.3.4	Inflexional marking of imperatives	301
6.4	Allomorphy in the lexical root	308
6.4.1	Introduction	308
6.4.2	The remnants of Latin perfective root morphology: ‘PYTA’ roots	308
6.4.2.1	Introduction	308
6.4.2.2	General characteristics of Romanian PYTA roots: stress, sigmatism, and thematic [e]	309
6.4.2.3	The fate of non-sigmatic PYTA roots: a veni , a fi , a face , a da , a sta , a cere	311
6.4.2.4	Other morphological effects of PYTA roots	314

6.4.3	Suppletion and other unusual forms of allomorphy: the verbs lua ‘take’, avea ‘want’, putea ‘be able’, vrea ‘want’, and fi ‘be’	315
6.5	The morphological history of non-finite forms	323
6.5.1	The divergence and semantic specialization of long and short infinitives	323
6.5.2	The morphology of the past participle	326
6.5.3	The origins of the ‘supine’ and its relation to the past participle	328
6.5.4	The gerund	333
6.5.5	The morphological ‘feminization’ of non-finite forms	338
6.6	The emergence of ‘morphomic’ patterns in the verb	341
6.6.1	Introduction	341
6.6.2	Morphomic repercussions of Latin perfective morphology	342
6.6.3	The ‘N-pattern’	345
6.6.4	The fate of patterns of alternation originally produced by palatalization	350
6.6.5	The supine and past participle as ‘morphome’ in diachrony	356
6.7	The morphological history of auxiliary verbs	359
6.7.1	Overview	359
6.7.2	Auxiliary have	360
6.7.3	Auxiliary want	362
6.7.4	Conditional auxiliaries	364
6.7.5	Auxiliary be	368
6.8	Novel periphrastic constructions involving auxiliary verbs and non-finite verb forms	369
6.8.1	Introduction	369
6.8.2	The periphrastic perfect	370
6.8.3	The trans-Danubian pluperfect periphrasis	371
6.8.4	Future periphrases	372
6.8.5	The future in the past periphrasis	374
6.8.6	The conditional periphrasis	374
6.8.7	Periphrases with past participle	376
6.8.8	Periphrases with the gerund	379
7.	Word formation in diachrony	383
7.1	Structure and segmentation of affixes	383
7.1.1	Difficulties of analysis	383
7.1.2	Variants of suffixes	385
7.1.3	The phonetic structure of suffixes, and stress	385
7.1.4	Types of bases selected by suffixes	387
7.2	Diminutive and augmentative suffixes	388
7.2.1	Diminutive suffixes	388
7.2.1.1	Grammatical and semantic properties	388
7.2.1.2	Inventory and origins	390
7.2.1.3	Productivity	391
7.2.2	Augmentative suffixes	393
7.2.2.1	Grammatical and semantic properties	393
7.2.2.2	Inventory and origins	394
7.2.2.3	Productivity	394
7.3	Agentive suffixation	394
7.3.1	Grammatical and semantic properties	394
7.3.2	The grammar of -tor derivatives	396

X CONTENTS

7.3.3	Inventory and origins	398
7.3.4	Productivity	400
7.4	Ethnic suffixation	401
7.4.1	Organization of ethnonyms	401
7.4.2	Inventory, origin, and characteristics of ethnonymic suffixes	402
7.4.3	Productivity	404
7.5	Suffixal marking of sex/natural gender	406
7.5.1	Mobile noun and sex-marking suffix (motional suffix) versus epicene noun	406
7.5.2	Sex-marking suffixes: inventory, origin, characteristics	407
7.5.3	Productivity	409
7.6	Suffixes for abstract nouns	410
7.6.1	Typology and semantics	410
7.6.2	Inventory, variants, characteristics, origin	411
7.6.2.1	Deverbal abstracts	411
7.6.2.2	Deadjectival/denominal abstracts	413
7.6.2.3	The grammar of the suffix -re and its variants	413
7.6.2.4	The status of the suffix -are : the relation to -re	414
7.6.2.5	The grammar of the suffixes -it/-ărit	415
7.6.2.6	The suffixes -tură, -ciune , and their variants	416
7.6.3	Productivity, synonymy, competition	416
7.6.3.1	Competition between the long infinitive and the nominal supine	418
7.6.3.2	Suffixal formation ~ competition with the long infinitive (and nominalized supine)	420
7.6.3.3	Competition between different suffixal formations	420
7.7	Adjectival suffixation	422
7.7.1	Characteristics, inventory, origin	422
7.7.2	Productivity	425
7.8	Adverbial suffixation	426
7.8.1	Preliminary remarks	426
7.8.2	Inventory of suffixes and their characterization	426
7.8.2.1	The suffixes -ește, -icește	426
7.8.2.2	The suffix -iș/-â	430
7.8.2.3	The suffix -mente	430
7.8.2.4	Diminutive adverbial suffixes	431
7.8.2.5	On the (old and neological) suffix -e	431
7.8.2.6	Notes on expressive formants (adverbial augments)	432
7.9	Verbal suffixation	433
7.9.1	Inventory, grammatical and semantic characteristics, origins	433
7.9.2	Productivity, competition, semantics	436
7.10	The negative prefix ne-	438
7.10.1	Origin and history	438
7.10.2	Forms and grammatical properties	438
7.10.3	Semantic properties	440
7.10.4	Productivity	440
7.10.5	Other negative prefixes	441
7.11	Other derivational prefixes	441
7.11.1	Inventory, characteristics	441
7.11.2	Origins	444

CONTENTS xi

7.11.3	Meaning	445
7.11.4	Productivity	446
7.12	Prefixoids and suffixoids	446
7.13	The formation of compound nouns, adjectives, and verbs	449
7.13.1	Introduction	449
7.13.2	Compound nouns	450
7.13.3	Compound adjectives	464
7.13.4	Compound verbs	467
7.14	The historical morphology of numerals	468
7.14.1	Introduction	468
7.14.2	Cardinal numerals	469
7.14.3	Ordinal numerals	471
7.14.4	Other numerical expressions	473
8.	Conclusion	474
	Textual sources	479
	References	487
	Index	515